Megalo is pleased to invite you to Patterning: surface design projects, our upcoming exhibition by Kamberri/Canberra artist Annie Trevillian at Megalo Print Studio.

The exhibition brings together a range of surface design projects, highlighting in particular the Dhulwa and Gawanggal community design projects, together with recent studio-based fabric works. Drawing inspiration from the landscape, motifs and patterns from the natural world weave in and out of Trevillian's studio practice.

Using drawing and painting as the basis for screenprint and digital surface designs, Trevillian's artworks are transformed in a process of digital layering and assemblage. Presented together with studies and images, primarily watercolours of local flora and fauna drawn from the site, the exhibition reveals an iterative design process through which Trevillian joyfully re-interprets her natural surroundings.

Annie Trevillian is an established Kamberri/Canberra based textile designer, artist and maker with a professional studio practice spanning over 35 years. She integrates drawing, painting and screenprinting with digital technologies. She has been an active member of Megalo Print Studio since 1983 and Craft ACT since 1988.
